Mayor Jim LiVecchi said he has used three things to guide his last two years as mayor: integrity, professionalism and self-accountability.

“I don’t think that the end justifies the means, and that we should always use the Golden Rule,” LiVecchi said.

“I try to be open and impartial to everyone. I also look forward to talking with people. There is a lot of passion in our community, but unfortunately you can’t satisfy everyone.”

Before becoming mayor, LiVecchi was an area manager with United Parcel Service.

He has helped manage the Community Thanksgiving Dinner, worked with the local American Red Cross, Helping Hands to provide meals, volunteered at Boys & Girls Club and is a member of the Salida Rotary Club and St. Joseph’s Parish Council.

“Some of my goals for the (city)council are more transparency, following the law and fixing the missteps with Vandaveer Ranch.” LiVecchi said. “I just hope to impart some structure to the council.”
